Hello, Northern California! For far too long Southern Californians and Northern Californians have fought over who has the best part of the state. Allow me to settle that argument. Despite having grown up very close to the shores of Southern California's beautiful beaches, I can say without hesitation that each part of the state is but two sides of the same beautiful golden coin. No matter how you flip it, our state is magnificent from top to bottom.

We chose to launch our inaugural Northern California's Real Estate Woman of Influence through a nomination process to take a look at important women and rising stars of commercial real estate in that part of the state. The achievements of the 36 professionals chosen this year are far too plentiful to state here, but the list clearly shows just how important women have become in the industry. So now, meet the women behind some of the biggest deals in the commercial real estate industry in Northern California:
